

Citations & Variables for Heatmaps

Kristen Syme

Construal Level Theory (climate change experiments): variables and associated citations

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Citation                         |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• environmental engagement score</li><li>• proenvironmental behaviour</li></ul>                                                                                                                                                                                           | Attanasi et al., 2025            |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• objective temporal distance</li><li>• confidence in economic recovery</li><li>• perceived sustainability objectives</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions</li></ul>                                                                                                     | Balaguer-Mercado A. et al., 2023 |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• psychological proximity</li><li>• exposure to positive visions</li><li>• environmental identity</li><li>• eco-tech use intentions</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions</li></ul>                                                                                       | Bosone et al., 2024              |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• risk framing vs efficacy</li><li>• objective geographic distance</li><li>• response efficacy perception</li><li>• objective geographic distance (-)</li><li>• proenvironmental policy support</li><li>• risk perception</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions</li></ul> | Chu and Yang, 2020               |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• self-efficacy perception</li><li>• interactivity</li><li>• contingency</li><li>• proenvironmental behaviour</li><li>• psychological distance framing (-)</li><li>• proenvironmental policy support</li><li>• risk perception</li></ul>                                  | Fox et al., 2020                 |

- proenvironmental behaviour
- psychological distance (-)

Guillard et al., 2021

- gender (men)
- peer contributions
- proenvironmental value-action gap
- perceived personal impact
- immediacy (-)
- uncertainty
- age

Hoffmann et al., 2024

- proenvironmental intentions
- nostalgic message
- China
- childhood memory recall
- temporal psychological distance (-)
- USA
- nostalgia

Huang J. et al., 2024

- proenvironmental behaviour
- desktop intervention
- emotional intensity
- negative affect
- proenvironmental intentions
- response efficacy
- virtual reality
- temporal psychological distance (-)

Hurrell et al., 2024

- low construal
- adaptation framing
- low construal thinking
- high construal
- mitigation framing
- high construal thinking
- proenvironmental behaviour
- risk perception
- construal message mismatch (-)
- proenvironmental intentions

Jia Y. et al., 2021

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                            |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• knowledge level</li> <li>• objective temporal distance</li> <li>• objective temporal distance (-)</li> <li>• perceived severity</li> <li>• proenvironmental intentions</li> </ul>                                                                                             | Thomsen, 2024              |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• gender (women)</li> <li>• cost (-)</li> <li>• policy attributes</li> <li>• education</li> <li>• longer residence</li> <li>• income (-)</li> <li>• psychological distance (-)</li> <li>• proenvironmental policy support</li> <li>• objective temporal distance (-)</li> </ul> | Wei Y. et al., 2023        |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• proenvironmental support</li> <li>• hope</li> <li>• imagination task (vs control)</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                  | Wenzel et al., 2024        |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• anticipated regret if carpooling (-)</li> <li>• psychological distance from pandemic (+)</li> <li>• anticipated regret if not carpooling</li> <li>• proenvironmental intentions</li> </ul>                                                                                    | Xiao Q. et al., 2024       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• proenvironmental behaviour</li> <li>• risk perception</li> <li>• virtual reality</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                   | van Gevelt T. et al., 2023 |

---

Table 1: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (CLT climate change experiments) and their associated citations.

Construal Level Theory (climate change surveys): variables and associated citations

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | Citation                  |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• nature walks</li><li>• geographic psychological distance (-)</li><li>• temporal psychological distance (-)</li><li>• social psychological distance (-)</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions (limit dispoable)</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions (buy regional)</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions (eco purchase)</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions (water conservation)</li></ul> | Bosone and Bertoldo, 2022 |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• gender (girls)</li><li>• caring beliefs</li><li>• dispositional empathy</li><li>• threat perception (condor)</li><li>• psychological distance (-)</li></ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Büscher M. et al., 2023   |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• proenvironmental intentions</li><li>• psychological distance (-)</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions</li></ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Carmi and Kimhi, 2015     |

- negative emotions

Demski et al., 2017

- issue salience

- flood experience

- issue type

- climate concern

- proenvironmental intentions

- proenvironmental policy support

- proximity to covid

D'Arco M. et al., 2022

- subjective norms

- extrinsic motives

- perceived control

- attitude

- proenvironmental intentions

- flood exposure

Guillard M. et al., 2021

- drought exposure

- place attachment

- risk perception

- psychological distance (-)

- proenvironmental behaviour

- global climate concern

Haden et al., 2012

- perceived local water availability shortage

- proenvironmental intentions

|                                                                                                |                      |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• climate change belief</li> </ul>                      | Hao et al., 2020     |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• age (65+)</li> </ul>                                  |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• political affiliation (Democrat)</li> </ul>           |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• proenvironmental behaviour</li> </ul>                 |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• proenvironmental policy support</li> </ul>            |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• personal norm (proenvironmental)</li> </ul>           | Kim et al., 2022     |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• ascribed responsibility</li> </ul>                    |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• proenvironmental intentions</li> </ul>                |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• psychological distance</li> </ul>                     | Liu et al., 2021     |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• fear of covid19</li> </ul>                            |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• air pollution concern</li> </ul>                      |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• proenvironmental behaviour</li> </ul>                 |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• distant desirability</li> </ul>                       | Shabnam et al., 2021 |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• subjective norms</li> </ul>                           |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• attitude</li> </ul>                                   |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• attitude towards proenvironmental products</li> </ul> |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• perceived behavioural control</li> </ul>              |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• near desirability</li> </ul>                          |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• distant feasibility</li> </ul>                        |                      |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• proenvironmental intentions (eco purchase)</li> </ul> |                      |

- perceived benefits of carbon capture and storage

Shah P. et al., 2023

- positive affect

- political affiliation (Democrat)

- risk perception

- psychological distance (-)

- proenvironmental tech support

- certainty

Spence et al., 2011

- impact on developing countries

- objective temporal distance (-)

- objective geographic distance (-)

- proenvironmental intentions

- age

Verplanken et al., 2020

- green self-identity

- pro-eco worldview

- habitual worry

- anxious emotions

- gender (women)

- environmental values

- proenvironmental behaviour

- doubtful (audience segment)
- alarmed (audience segment)
- cautious (audience segment)
- self/response efficacy perception
- social norms
- concerned (audience segment)
- objective temporal distance (-)
- hypothetical distance (-)
- proenvironmental intentions
- education
- age (36-40)
- gender (women)
- environmental values
- risk perception
- psychological distance (-)
- proenvironmental behaviour

Waldo J.L. et al., 2025

Wu M. et al., 2023

---

Table 2: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (CLT climate change surveys) and their associated citations.

Construal Level Theory (infectious disease control): variables and associated citations

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Citation                    |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• high-involvement investors</li><li>• high-involvement investors (-)</li><li>• positive SRI screenings</li><li>• risk aversion</li><li>• income</li><li>• impact criteria</li><li>• financial attitudes</li><li>• psychological distance (-)</li><li>• socially responsible intentions</li><li>• public health</li></ul> | Apostolakis G. et al., 2016 |

- perceived severity (-)
- conservative media exposure (-)
- nonpartisan media use
- psychological distance
- perceived severity
- psychological distance (-)
- covid19 vaccine intentions
- public health
- temporal psychological distance
- zika concern (-)
- self-relevance
- objective geographic distance
- zika concern
- mosquito control intentions
- zika containment intentions
- travel avoidance intentions
- safe-sex intentions
- public health
- virtual reality
- vaccination intentions
- public health

Hmielowski J.D. et al., 2023

Johnson, 2018

Xu Z. et al., 2024

- virtual reality
- augmented reality
- video
- social distancing intentions
- self-test intentions
- vaccination intentions
- self-test behaviour
- booster uptake
- social distancing & mask wearing
- public health
- loss framing
- future-focused
- objective temporal distance (-)
- covid19 vaccine intentions
- public health

Xu and Dam, 2024

Xu and Wang, 2025

- risk perception (-)
- trait empathy
- political affiliation (conservative) (-)
- social psychological distance (-)
- prosocial emotions
- risk perception
- monkeypox vaccination policy support
- monkeypox vaccination intentions
- public health

Yang and Dong, 2024

Table 3: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (CLT infectious disease control) and their associated citations.

Consideration of Future Consequences: significant predictors, mediators, moderators, and dependent variables

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Citation                                                                |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• future-focused environment</li><li>• politically conservative (-)</li><li>• women (-)</li><li>• altruism</li><li>• NGO familiarity</li><li>• hope condition</li><li>• environmental attitude</li><li>• age</li><li>• future-focused</li><li>• climate intentions</li><li>• climate behaviour</li><li>• climate policy support</li><li>• temporal discounting</li><li>• future-focused</li><li>• climate behaviour</li></ul> | Lagomarsino and Lemarié, 2024 Macaskill A.C. et al., 2019 |

- eco-anxiety

Pittaway et al., 2024

- cognitive alternatives

- present-focused (-)

- present-focused

- future-focused

- climate intentions

- radical climate intentions

- future-generation framing

Santana et al., 2023

- empathy induction (-)

- honesty-humility (-)

- future-focused (-)

- recent antibiotic use

- men

- disease severity

- antibiotic use (hypothetical)

- reputational concern

Sjåstad, 2019

- future-focused (condition)

- health donation willingness

- health volunteer willingness

|                                             |                             |
|---------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| • temporal distance (-)                     | Xu and Wang, 2025           |
| • loss framing                              |                             |
| • future-focused                            |                             |
| • Covid19 vaccine intentions                |                             |
| • determinance                              | van Dam and Fischer, 2015   |
| • sustainable identity                      |                             |
| • biospheric values                         |                             |
| • relevance of sustainability attributes    |                             |
| • determinance of sustainability attributes |                             |
| • future-focused                            |                             |
| • climate behaviour                         |                             |
| • product category                          | van Dam and van Trijp, 2013 |
| • relevance of sustainability attributes    |                             |
| • determinance of sustainability attributes |                             |
| • future-focused                            |                             |
| • climate behaviour                         |                             |

---

Table 4: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (Consideration of Future Consequences) and their associated citations.

Temporal Discounting: significant predictors, mediators, moderators, and dependent variables

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Citation                                                                                       |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• health stress</li><li>• temporal discounting (-)</li><li>• Covid19 containment measure compliance</li><li>• risk perception</li><li>• risk perception (-)</li><li>• optimism pandemic</li><li>• depression symptoms</li><li>• temporal discounting (-)</li><li>• Covid19 containment measure compliance</li><li>• Covid19 containment measure non-compliance</li><li>• stress</li><li>• temporal discounting</li><li>• Covid19 containment measure non-compliance</li><li>• stockpiling during Covid19</li></ul> | Agrawal M. et al., 2023 Calluso C. et al., 2021 DeAngelis BN et al., 2022 |

|                                                      |                               |
|------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| • collective responsibility (-)                      | Freitas-Lemos R. et al., 2023 |
| • complacency                                        |                               |
| • unemployment                                       |                               |
| • temporal discounting                               |                               |
| • Covid19 vaccine hesitancy                          |                               |
| • risk aversion                                      | Ihli et al., 2022             |
| • present-bias                                       |                               |
| • preference for short-term gains vs biodiversity    |                               |
| • objective temporal distance (-)                    | Jacquet J. et al., 2013       |
| • climate public goods contribution                  |                               |
| • objective temporal distance (-)                    | Kaplan B.A. et al., 2014      |
| • social distance (-)                                |                               |
| • uncertainty (-)                                    |                               |
| • climate action willingness                         |                               |
| • objective temporal distance (-)                    | Law KF et al., 2024           |
| • beneficiary type (future others vs present others) |                               |
| • moral obligation                                   |                               |
| • prosocial donation willingness                     |                               |
| • prosocial policy support                           |                               |
| • prosocial donation                                 |                               |

• income (-) Lloyd A et al., 2021

• sensitivity to reward magnitude

• age (-)

• temporal discounting

• Covid19 containment measure non-compliance

• age Lo Presti S. et al., 2022

• internal locus of control

• authority respect

• longtermism

• temporal discounting (-)

• Covid19 containment measure compliance

• Covid19 containment measure non-compliance

• future-focused Macaskill A.C. et al., 2019

• temporal discounting

• climate action

• gender (men) Nuscheler R et al., 2016

• risk aversion

• fear of side effects (-)

• subjective vaccine knowledge

• objective vaccine knowledge

• temporal discounting (-)

• gender (women)

• flu vaccination

|                                               |                            |
|-----------------------------------------------|----------------------------|
| • length of payment                           | Vasquez-Lavín et al., 2019 |
| • biodiversity tourism vs seed supply program |                            |
| • familiarity with marine program             |                            |
| • income                                      |                            |
| • age                                         |                            |
| • climate action willingness                  |                            |
| • psychological distance(-)                   | Wei Y. et al., 2023        |
| • objective temporal distance (-)             |                            |
| • education                                   |                            |
| • income (-)                                  |                            |
| • longer residence                            |                            |
| • psychological distance (-)                  |                            |
| • policy attributes                           |                            |
| • cost (-)                                    |                            |
| • gender (women)                              |                            |
| • climate action willingness                  |                            |
| • climate policy support                      |                            |

Table 5: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (Temporal Discounting) and their associated citations.

Anticipated Emotion: significant predictors, mediators, moderators, and dependent variables

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Citation                                                                                     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• men</li><li>• women</li><li>• perceived benefits of vaccination</li><li>• anticipated regret if unvaccinated</li><li>• HPV vaccine intention</li><li>• graphical images vs text</li><li>• anticipated regret questions condition</li><li>• message involvement</li><li>• HPV vaccination intention</li><li>• positive framing</li><li>• negative framing</li><li>• anticipated pride of purchase</li><li>• eco-rating level</li><li>• price level (-)</li><li>• climate intention</li></ul> | Christy et al., 2016 Cox et al., 2014 Gorissen et al., 2024 |

- unknown-effectiveness condition
- prevention focus
- vaccine effectiveness condition
- perceived vaccination necessity
- perceived vaccine safety
- anticipated regret if unvaccinated
- flu vaccination uptake
- flu vaccination intention
- perceived infection probability
- anticipated worry if unvaccinated
- past vaccination
- age
- anticipated regret if vaccinated (-)
- flu vaccination uptake
- flu vaccination intention
- past vaccination
- anticipated counterfactual relief
- eligibility for free vaccine
- anticipated regret if unvaccinated
- flu vaccination uptake
- flu vaccination intention

Leder et al., 2015

Liao et al., 2013

Lorimer et al., 2024

- instrumental attitudes about vaccination
- barriers to vaccination
- subjective norms about vaccination
- low political trust (-)
- age
- anticipated regret if unvaccinated
- covid19 vaccination intention
- health profession (midwives)
- past vaccination
- decisional uncertainty
- agreement with vaccination policy
- moral responsibility to vaccinate
- cost-benefit perceptions
- vaccination beliefs
- anticipated regret if unvaccinated
- vaccination attitude
- pertussis vaccination intention
- negative affect
- anticipatory emotion condition
- infection risk perception
- covid19 prevention behaviours
- mask wearing

Rountree and Prentice,
2022

Visser et al., 2016

Wang et al., 2022

|                                            |                         |
|--------------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| • psychological distance from pandemic (+) | Xiao et al., 2024       |
| • anticipated regret if not carpooling     |                         |
| • anticipated regret if carpooling (-)     |                         |
| • climate intention                        |                         |
| • perceived cancer likelihood              | Ziarnowski et al., 2009 |
| • decision urgency                         |                         |
| • perceived cancer severity likelihood     |                         |
| • anticipated regret if unvaccinated       |                         |
| • anticipated regret if vaccinated (-)     |                         |
| • HPV vaccination intention                |                         |
| • HPV vaccination uptake                   |                         |

Table 6: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (Anticipated Emotion) and their associated citations.

Cognitive Alternatives: significant predictors, mediators, moderators, and dependent variables

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Citation              |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• psychological distance (-)</li><li>• environmental identity</li><li>• exposure to postive eco future vision conditions</li><li>• climate intentions</li><li>• eco-tech use intentions</li></ul> | Bosone et al., 2024   |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• utopian propensity</li><li>• utopian affect</li><li>• environmental cognitive alternatives</li><li>• climate intentions</li><li>• climate behaviour</li><li>• citizenship intentions</li></ul>  | Chevrier et al., 2024 |

- utopian thinking
- expansive altruism
- longtermism
- environmental cognitive alternatives
- climate policy support
- justice policy support
- future generations policy support
- eco-anxiety
- future-focused thinking
- present-focused (-)
- present-focused
- cognitive alternatives
- climate intentions
- radical climate intentions
- legacy concerns
- longtermism
- cognitive alternatives
- climate behaviour

Law et al., 2023

Pittaway et al., 2024

Stylianios Syropoulos et al., 2024

|                                        |                     |
|----------------------------------------|---------------------|
| • government efficacy                  | Troy et al., 2024   |
| • government efficacy (-)              |                     |
| • collective efficacy (-)              |                     |
| • fear                                 |                     |
| • counterarguing                       |                     |
| • cautionary message                   |                     |
| • positive message                     |                     |
| • environmental cognitive alternatives |                     |
| • climate intentions                   |                     |
| • environmental cognitive alternatives | Wright et al., 2020 |
| • climate intentions                   |                     |
| • climate behaviour                    |                     |
| • environmental identity               | Wright et al., 2021 |
| • cognitive alternatives               |                     |
| • climate intentions                   |                     |
| • climate behaviour                    |                     |

Table 7: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (Cognitive Alternatives) and their associated citations.

Episodic Future Thinking: significant predictors, mediators, moderators, and dependent variables

| Variables                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Citation              |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• EFT condition</li></ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Bø and Wolff, 2020    |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• proenvironmental behaviour</li><li>• childhood memory recall</li><li>• nostalgia</li><li>• proenvironmental intentions</li><li>• risk perception</li></ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Huang J. et al., 2024 |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• temporal psychological distance (-)</li><li>• expectations (COVID-19 × vaccine)</li><li>• expectations of severe COVID-19 outcomes (-)</li><li>• negative COVID-19 fantasies</li><li>• negative COVID-19 fantasies × vaccine fantasies</li><li>• negative COVID-19 impact expectation</li><li>• negative vaccine impact expectation</li><li>• provaccine information search</li><li>• vaccination status (vaccinated)</li></ul> | Kim S. et al., 2024   |

- vaccination uptake
- vaccine fantasies
- vaccine fantasies (−1 SD)
- vaccine hesitancy
- expansive altruism
- longtermism
- objective temporal distance (-)
- perceived positive impact
- subjective visualisation ability
- anticipatory emotion condition
- covid19 prevention behaviours
- infection risk perception
- mask wearing
- negative affect
- hope
- imagination task (vs control)
- proenvironmental support

Kim S. et al., 2024

Law KF et al., 2024

Wang XTX et al., 2022

Wenzel et al., 2024

- SW China (-)
- affective attitude
- altruistic values
- descriptive norms
- disasters imagery (-)
- education
- emotional arousal
- environmental attitude
- experience imagery
- future
- gender (male)
- human
- impact imagery (-)
- income
- nature imagery
- prescriptive norms
- proenvironmental behaviour

Yangli et al., 2025

Table 8: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (Episodic Future Thinking) and their associated citations.

Utopian Thinking: significant predictors, mediators, moderators, and dependent variables

| Variables                                                                                | Citation              |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• hope</li></ul>                                   | Badaan et al., 2022   |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• social justice intentions</li></ul>              |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• system justification (-)</li></ul>               |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• climate policy support</li></ul>                 | Basso and Krpan, 2022 |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• climate resilience</li></ul>                     |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• social justice</li></ul>                         |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• social justice policy support</li></ul>          |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• social justice protest intentions</li></ul>      |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• tuiph factor collective orienation</li></ul>     |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• tuiph factor economic transformation</li></ul>   |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• tuiph factor transformative motivation</li></ul> |                       |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• tuiph general factor</li></ul>                   |                       |

- climate intentions
- eco-tech use intentions
- environmental identity
- exposure to positive visions
- psychological proximity

Bosone et al., 2024

- antiutopian thinking (-)
- citizenship intentions
- climate behaviour
- climate intentions
- environmental cognitive alternatives
- utopian affect
- utopian propensity

Chevrier et al., 2024

- climate intentions
- dystopian thinking
- fear
- hope
- hope (-)
- utopian thinking

Daysh et al., 2024

|                                        |                       |
|----------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| • antiutopian thinking (-)             | Fernando et al., 2018 |
| • citizenship engagement               |                       |
| • citizenship intentions               |                       |
| • future -> present sequence           |                       |
| • system justification (-)             |                       |
| • utopian thinking                     |                       |
| • climate behaviour                    | Fernando et al., 2019 |
| • climate intentions                   |                       |
| • evaluation of depicted society       |                       |
| • green vs scifi utopia                |                       |
| • participative efficacy               |                       |
| • social change motivation             |                       |
| • climate policy support               | Law et al., 2023      |
| • environmental cognitive alternatives |                       |
| • expansive altruism                   |                       |
| • future generations policy support    |                       |
| • justice policy support               |                       |
| • longtermism                          |                       |
| • utopian thinking                     |                       |

---

Table 9: Table of variables presented in the heatmap (Utopian Thinking) and their associated citations.